BRIEF HISTORY OF SENIOR & PROFESSIONAL LACROSSE IN BRITISH COLUMBIA

1882–1886 ...FORGOTTEN BEGINNINGS

The first formal, 'organised' lacrosse game played in British Columbia (between teams representing two different cities) occurred on Saturday, August 28, 1886. Played at Beacon Hill Park between the Vancouver and Victoria clubs, the visiting mainlanders won by the score of 3-1 – or three “games” to one, in the old-style nomenclature used at the time.

For historical trivia sake: the first ever “goal” (game) was scored by the Vancouver coverpoint player, J. McNamee at 22:00 minutes into the match. McNamee ended up scoring all three goals for his team while outside home D.W. Morrow scored the lone Victoria tally.

However, while this particular match has gone into the history books as the first lacrosse game played in the province, the game's roots in British Columbia actually go back by four years to 1882.

On Thursday, February 16 of that year, an athletic club was organised in Victoria that included lacrosse as one of its sports. This was then followed by a highly-publicised match played at Beacon Hill Park on Saturday afternoon, June 17, 1882 although it was essentially a scrimmage game between two teams made up from the mostly-inexperienced players of the Victoria Athletic Club. For reasons unknown, the club was reported (or misreported) in the newspaper as the “Vancouver Athletic Club” – possibly in reference to Vancouver Island, on which Victoria is located – as “Vancouver”, the modern city located across the the Strait of Georgia, was four years away from existing as a civic geographical reference in British Columbia.

Other historical fragments from these early years include newspaper records of a match played in Victoria a few weeks later involving an unidentified collegiate team – as well as a photograph in the British Columbia provincial archives dated from 1883, taken in Victoria, of an unidentified lacrosse team in that city.

On Monday evening May 3, 1886, the Victoria Lacrosse Club was organised. After holding a couple meetings and at least one practise, the club's first game was played at Beacon Hill Park on May 29, 1886 although their opponents are not reported. This match was likely a scrimmage between club members.

1886–1890 ...THE NATIONAL GAME FINDS ITS FEET

In the years between the 1886 Beacon Hill match and the formation of the British Columbia Amateur Lacrosse Association (BCALA) in 1890, lacrosse clubs would make haphazard arrangements for challenge matches – usually to be held on such popular, public holiday events as Empire Day or Dominion Day.

As in 1886, there was only one match reported played in 1887 – played between Victoria and Vancouver on Dominion Day with Victoria winning by two goals / “games” to none. Prior to this, the Victoria Lacrosse Club had met and re-organised itself on May 2, 1887 and subsequently played at least one scrimmage between club members. In the interior of the province, Kamloops had established a lacrosse club by June 1887 but details about it are unknown.

Vancouver Lacrosse Club was formally organised in 1888. The first practices were held on the sawdust at the Hastings Mill yard but it soon became apparent that more suitable playing grounds were required. Through the efforts of Al Larwill, AE Beck, and CG Johnson work began on clearing the Cambie Street grounds which became the first home for athletic clubs in the city.

New Westminster newspapers reported the formation of a lacrosse club in that city on May 12, 1888, but their local fans would have to wait another year before the first ever lacrosse game was played in the Royal City. The 1888 season saw multiple challenges being issued back and forth between the Victoria and Vancouver clubs. In August, Kamloops played host to a match between the Victoria Lacrosse Club and Vancouver Lacrosse Club during the Canadian Pacific Railroad picnic held there. Won 3-2 by Victoria, the match took around three hours duration to complete. At one point, high winds and a dust storm interrupted play and it took fifty minutes to complete play for the final “game”.

The following spring saw Vancouver Lacrosse Club put forth the Alhambra Cup for competition – originally to be won by the team winning the most matches played in Vancouver, although as the playing season progressed, the Vancouver club would sometimes announce beforehand that, regardless of location, the upcoming game would count towards Alhambra Cup competition.

On June 8, 1889, the visiting Vancouver team dispatched an inexperienced New Westminster side with a 3-1 result in the debut of lacrosse for the Royal City. From such inauspicious beginnings on that Saturday afternoon, no one in attendance could have known they had just witnessed the birth of what would become arguably one of the most legendary lacrosse clubs in all of competitive sports.

After some wrangling, Vancouver and New Westminster ended up making the trip in September to the Kamloops CPR picnic to play; in the meanwhile, Victoria stayed home uninvited and sulked, feeling snubbed by the two other teams.

Concerns over betting at the final Alhambra Cup match in October 1889, which ended in a 2-2 draw, and disagreements between Vancouver and New Westminster over rules and player eligibility to play for what they deemed the 'championship', led some people to look at the example of Eastern Canada – for example, usage of a set code of rules like those used by the Manitoba Lacrosse Association. This encouraged them to look towards forming their own provincial association. A week before Christmas of 1889, during a dinner hosted by the president of the Vancouver Lacrosse Club for his players, discussion about the formation of a provincial association was brought up. The move towards formal, organised lacrosse would start to take shape in the spring.

1890–1908 ...MARCHING TOWARDS PROFESSIONALISM

The (original) British Columbia Amateur Lacrosse Association (BCALA) was formed at a meeting held in Vancouver at the Windsor Hotel between the Vancouver, Victoria, and New Westminster clubs on March 22, 1890. A schedule of six matches was drafted up and New Westminster swept their series to claim the first provincial championship (although some later historical records indicate Victoria as the champion of the inaugural season).

Vancouver would then win the next two titles (1891, 1892) followed by Victoria in 1893 (some records indicate New Westminster) – however over the following years, New Westminster would dominate the championship scene with titles in 1894, 1895, and 1897 through 1902 with Vancouver picking up the slack in the intervening years.

Revelstoke formed a lacrosse club on April 25, 1891.

The 1892 season was a great example of early organised field lacrosse. In an incredibly close campaign, each of Vancouver's five victories for the title was won by 1-goal margins, yet they still managed to let in more goals than they scored for the entire season. In those days, each goal scored was actually called winning a "game" and play ended after one team had accumulated four "games" to win the match or time ran out.

Victoria would have to wait until 1919 before winning a second senior title for the Capital City but their closest attempt came during the 1894 season when they tied New Westminster in the league standings. As a result of the draw, a playoff game to determine the championship was played on October 20, 1894 at Brockton Oval in Vancouver. New Westminster showed up at the field an hour and a half late and this later caused the game being called due to darkness and Victoria holding a 3-2 lead with eleven minutes remaining. The referee refused to give the victory to Victoria and the club later withdrew from the BCALA on November 2, 1894 in protest of the referee's indecision and the late arrival of their opponents.

Two campaigns around the turn of the century – in 1899 and 1900 – saw organised league play deteriorate from numerous cancellations of matches. For example, in August 1900, some scheduled league matches involving New Westminster were cancelled due to their subsequent tour of Eastern Canada that same month. There were also some matches against Victoria that New Westminster possibly refused to play – allegedly due to 'rough play' on Victoria's part in meetings earlier in the season.

1900 saw a lacrosse game played between the northern mining communities of Atlin and Pine City, perhaps to this day still the northernmost lacrosse game played in the province.

The senior ranks expanded in 1901 with the return of the Nanaimo Lacrosse Club after a two-year hiatus. The Coal City crew were able to secure a couple of surprise victories at the expense of the Vancouver club but generally remained the league's whipping post for the duration of their senior tenure. By mid-point of the 1902 season, the club had withdrawn from the league and defaulted their five remaining matches. The Vancouver YMCA lacrosse club went back east in October 1901 to challenge for the Minto Cup, the senior championship of Canada which was inaugurated earlier that season.

The 1903 senior lacrosse season ended in dispute between New Westminster and Vancouver and the league championship was still vehemently undecided at the start of the 1904 campaign. The differences between the two clubs dragged on after the three-team schedule was released. New Westminster withdrew from the league on June 2, 1904 after refusal to play two replays to decide the 1903 champion. There was some talk of a second Vancouver team joining, but in the end Vancouver Lacrosse Club and Victoria continued on with an eight-game schedule, which Vancouver handily won after five victories.

Despite the conflicts off the field, one bright spot during the 1903 campaign was growing attendance. The June 30, 1903 match at Brocton Oval between Vancouver and New Westminster saw 7,000 in attendance, reported to have been the best crowd since 1896. Two months later on August 29, 1903, a rematch between those same two teams drew 11,000 onlookers out to Brockton Oval in was dubbed by one newspaper reporter as “the greatest lacrosse match in West Canada”.

In 1905, the BCALA senior league was reformed with four members: New Westminster, Vancouver, Victoria, and a newly-formed club from Seattle. The Emerald City club was later ejected from the league after they were unable to play their two final scheduled games - a move somewhat encouraged by Vancouver since it would improve their record against their league-leading rivals in the Royal City.

The following season, 1906, saw Victoria withdraw from the senior league and Vancouver field a second club in the form of the Mount Pleasant Maple Leafs.

Armstrong Lacrosse Club, the first club established in the town, was founded on March 30, 1906. It would play its first match less than three weeks later on April 16, 1906, resulting in a draw versus a visiting team from Vernon with some years experience.

The first reported lacrosse games played in the Chilliwack area took place in 1906 – involving Chilliwack, two local Indian teams, and American teams from across the border in nearby Sumas and Bellingham.

Late in the season, in September 1906, lacrosse players and fans saw the donation of the Kilmarnock Cup as a trophy for the provincial senior championship. Through the efforts of Victoria Lacrosse Club, the $500 mug was donated on behalf of the scotch distillers John Walker & Sons and brought over from England. The Kilmarnock Cup would remain in competition until retired at the close of the 1960s.

New Westminster became the first Kilmarnock Cup champion in 1907, defeating Mount Pleasant Maple Leafs 5-4. Mount Pleasant had previously bested the Vancouver Lacrosse Club 11-4 in an intra-city playoff.

Victoria rejoined the senior league for 1908. The original schedule was then revised in August to accommodate New Westminster’s challenge trip to Montréal that resulted in the successful capture of the Minto Cup for the West Coast.

On September 26, 1908 in the final New Westminster-Vancouver match of the season, escalating player tempers on the field saw a riot break out when a New Westminster fan pelted a Vancouver player with eggs - which resulted in George Paris, the Vancouver trainer, retaliating by pulling out his gun and firing a shot into the crowd. Thankfully, no one was killed, although the bullet went through the coat of one spectator. Both clubs felt they were victims in the ugly incident and Vancouver stated their refusal to “play any further games in New Westminster...”

1909–1915 ...THE NATIONAL GAME REIGNS OVER THE WEST COST

The infamous gunshot incident of 1908, still talked about amongst fans as late as the 1950s, slipped off the attention of league executives by the start of the following season, buried under the growing, contentious debate regarding professionalism in the sport. During the 1908, New Westminster Salmonbellies, an amateur team, challenged and defeated the Montréal Shamrocks and Ottawa Capitals, both professional teams, for the Minto Cup – which was awarded to the professional champion of Canada. Now tainted for playing against professionals, New Westminster’s players had their amateur status revoked. As a result, in 1909 the BCALA went professional and the organisation became a league known as the British Columbia Lacrosse Association – although some amateur players were allowed and did compete alongside the professional players that season.

The bulk of the senior amateurs then formed a new organisation called the Pacific Coast Amateur Lacrosse Association (PCALA). Around the same time, the British Columbia Coast Lacrosse Association (BCCLA) formed on May 9, 1909 to replace the former BCALA as the provincial governing body for amateur players. Note that the modern-day BCLA has no direct lineage from the professional BCLA or earlier BCALA; the provincial association having its roots in the PCALA and BCCLA organisations. The PCALA was made up of four clubs, New Westminster, Vancouver Maple Leafs, Victoria, and the Vancouver Athletic Club (which soon withdrew before playing a single game).

The professional BCLA consisted of New Westminster Salmonbellies and the Vancouver Lacrosse Club and would stay at two member teams throughout its entire tenure - although as we shall see, many a season would be abandoned due to squabbling between clubs and owners. On July 24, 1909, the Vancouver Lacrosse Club won their first away game in four years, drubbing the Royal City squad 6-1 in front of the largest crowd out so far that season.

In the senior amateur ranks, the PCALA would see the Vancouver Athletic Club and Victoria Capitals join up with New Westminster while Vancouver Maple Leafs fell by the wayside in 1910. Vancouver Athletic Club would go on to the inaugural Mann Cup playoffs, defeated in a semi-final match 8-6 by the eventual champions Young Torontos.

On February 23, 1911, the Mount Pleasant Maple Leafs senior team decided to apply for membership in the professional league representing as the North Vancouver Lacrosse Club. While the prospective third team began the process to get itself organised, infighting within the former club soon broke out - to the point that both the Maple Leafs and North Vancouver submitted separate applications during the following month, bogged down by bureaucratic, political details and threats of court injunctions. While both the New Westminster Salmonbellies and the Vancouver Lacrosse Club seemed agreeable to a second Vancouver-based team (North Vancouver would play its matches in Vancouver, and not on the North Shore), it was obvious that a four-team pro league was not feasible due to limited money and talent to go around for everyone. Ultimately the issue was resolved when two test matches were arranged in the pre-season pitting the North Vancouver squad against the two pro clubs. After being soundly defeated by results of 12-3 and 13-3, their application was quickly rejected - and further talk of expanding the league was quickly silenced.

The 1911 campaign probably stands as the highwater mark of British Columbia lacrosse in terms of both quality on the field and popularity in the stands. Edouard "Newsy" Lalonde, regarded as the greatest lacrosse player of the first half of the 20th century, was signed on for $3500 ($72,000 in modern currency) - an incredible sum of cash in those days for a professional athlete. The series between the two local rivals was very close and intense; the regular season resulted in a draw in the standings and a two-game, total-goals playoff was required to determine that year's Minto cupholders. Vancouver secured their first ever shutout against the hated Salmonbellies during the second of a pair of exhibition matches held in honour of the royal coronation. Crowds were huge; the 12,045 that weathered out a drizzled Dominion Day afternoon at Recreation Park was believed to have been a record breaker. Crowds in the range of 8,000 - in excess of the record numbers just ten years prior - were considered the norm of the day and the attendance record would be surpassed again when the Toronto Tecumsehs unsuccessfully challenged the Vancouver Lacrosse Club for the Minto Cup in October.

The PCALA grew to four teams in 1912, when the Vancouver Fairviews joined up for one season. Over in the pro league, the BCLA almost folded mid-season in July 1912 after the New Westminster Salmonbellies threatened to withdraw from the two-team league. Differences were settled and play resumed around two-weeks later.

The BCLA season collapsed seven games into the 1913 campaign. The Salmonbellies again had issues with the Vancouver club and had refused to start a game. After almost two weeks with no agreement in the dispute, the Vancouver Lacrosse Club just simply withdrew from the league on July 17, 1913.

After a successful PCALA season, the Vancouver Athletic Club fielded a professional team in 1914 and replaced the departed Vancouver Lacrosse Club in the BCLA. However, they too failed to make it to the end of the season as the club disbanded on July 8, 1914, - which sadly saw the end of one of the more promising pro seasons to have come along in a few years.

In the senior amateur ranks, the Vancouver Athletic Club defeated the Calgary Chinooks and Brampton Excelsiors in Mann Cup challenge matches but the Mann Cup trustees disputed the status of one of the Vancouver players in the series versus Brampton. Despite the views of British Columbia lacrosse, national lacrosse and amateur athletic organisations that supported Vancouver's position, the trustees instead awarded the cup to the Calgary Chinooks on September 29, 1914. Vancouver however held on to the gold trophy and refused to turn it over to either the trustees or the Chinooks. On December 7, 1914, the Canadian Amateur Lacrosse Association overruled Mann Cup trustee Joseph Lally and awarded the cup to the Vancouver Athletic Club.

1914 saw the first lacrosse game played in what would become the northern city of Prince George when Quesnel defeated South Fort George by a score of 3-0

For an all-too-brief moment in time, a pro league called the Western Lacrosse Association was formed in 1915 as a replacement for the (temporarily folded) BCLA with teams in Vancouver and Victoria. After the initial announcement of this newly formed league, no further reference was ever made to it again. New Westminster soon returned to the pro fold along with Vancouver. Victoria was then quietly dropped and as far as anyone was concerned, the BCLA was back in business as per usual. The British Columbia Amateur Lacrosse Association was formed in May 1915, six years after the demise of the previous BCALA incarnation as yet another provincial lacrosse body. There were now a whole host of provincial bodies about: the BCALA, the PCALA, and the BCCLA organisations in the amateur ranks and the BCLA for the professional players – as well as the Vancouver Amateur Lacrosse Association, in which during one of their junior matches, the ball was lost and the game had to be abandoned until the following week.

1916–1917 ...PATRIOTIC LACROSSE DURING THE GREAT WAR

Organised Lacrosse fell by the wayside in 1916 and suspended operations for the remainder of the First World War as the war effort took centre-stage attention. When club officials in New Westminster refused to field a team in 1916 and for the rest of the duration of the war, Con Jones continued to plan and recruit players in early April 1916 for a potential pro campaign involving two Vancouver clubs. However, a BCLA league meeting held on the evening of April 18, 1916 stopped those plans dead in their tracks when it was decided that “in the interest of the Empire’s fight, it would be better if professional lacrosse were suspended on the Pacific Coast until after the end of the war”.

In the absence of the pro and amateur leagues, 1916 would see a couple exhibition games arranged by old-timer teams for patriotic fund raising while 1917 would feature a five-game ‘patriotic lacrosse series’ between two squads called the Vancouver Patriotic Club and Maple Leafs – featuring an unprecedented mix of professional and amateur players from Vancouver and New Westminster, with all profits going to charities associated with the war effort. The initial old-timers’ match, played at Brockton Point on Dominion Day of 1916, was attended by 2,500 to 3,000 fans and raised $1700 for the Returned Soldiers Fund.

In the following year, work was begun starting in January and through into the spring months to revive lacrosse. At a formal meeting held on April 18, 1917, twenty-seven players from Vancouver and New Westminster decided to organise a patriotic lacrosse series with the entire profits to be contributed to patriotic charities. Many of the players who were married or otherwise unable to go overseas, nevertheless wanted to do their part in assisting in the war effort. Finances were handled by the British Columbia Amateur Athletic Union (BCAAU) due to one of the stipulations required to preserve the amateur status of the amateur players who would be playing alongside their professional brethren. Players were paid by means of a co-operative system with a portion of the gate receipts going to the Canadian Patriotic Fund.

In addition to the patriotism aspect, the series was used to keep public interest in the game with the post-war years in mind. Boys under the age of fourteen were admitted for free, in the hopes it would encourage future interest and participation in the sport. The rosters were somewhat fluid as players came and went. For the first three games, the teams were the Vancouver Patriotic Club and Maple Leafs. In the fourth match, New Westminster featured in a combined Maple Leafs squad versus Vancouver.

1918–1932 ...POST-WAR REVIVAL AND THE END OF AN ERA

The Mainland Lacrosse Association was formed in 1918 with New Westminster and Vancouver as a pro league replacement to the inactive BCLA. In the senior ranks, the Vancouver Amateur Lacrosse Association (which was regarded below the PCALA in terms of level of play) resumed operations with two clubs, New Westminster and the Vancouver Coughlans Shipyards Amateur Athletic Association. The VALA junior ranks would witness the first association of the name 'Adanacs' with lacrosse when the Vancouver Adanacs finished second in the four-team city junior league.

A year later at the BCLA Annual Meetings held on May 8 and 15, 1919, the Minto Cup Trustees and British Columbia Lacrosse Association refused to recognise the results of the Mainland Lacrosse Association series as being official. Vancouver had won the eight-game series but would not be awarded the Minto Cup. Vancouver claimed that they were in perfect order to organise a new league in lieu of the BCLA, which had suspended operations for the duration of World War One. New Westminster disagreed and claimed (somewhat well after the fact) that their club did not actually operate in 1918.

The professional British Columbia Lacrosse Association resumed play that season with the New Westminster Salmonbellies and the Vancouver Terminals – a new club founded by Pete Muldoon and Harry Pickering on May 19, 1919 and incorporated with $5,000 in capital as the Vancouver Terminal Lacrosse Company two months later around July 18, 1919. The senior amateur Pacific Coast Amateur Lacrosse Association had by now resumed play with three teams: Victoria Foundation Shipyards, New Westminster, and Vancouver Athletic Club. In the city's other, lesser senior league, Vancouver National Athletic Club, Squamish Indians of North Vancouver, and Vancouver Native Sons competed for the VALA honours.

The 1920 season saw one change in the PCALA – Victoria withdrew from the PCALA in mid-season on June 18, 1920 – while the VALA senior league consisted of four clubs: Richmond Farmers, Vancouver National Athletic Club, Vancouver Great War Veterans Association and a team of ILA Longshoremen. In the professional league, the May 24 game saw the largest crowd turnout in New Westminster since the heady days of 1911. The Dominion Day match-up saw the novelty of four movie cameras in attendance along with numerous fans from Vancouver Island and from as far as Seattle and Tacoma. The large crowds continued throughout the season.

In late September and October of 1920, Con Jones met with his former star-player Billy Fitzgerald to lay out some plans to field a team to play against a Vancouver team involving Jones. Although never progressing beyond talk, conflicting and muddled news reports hinted that Fitzgerald would either organise and manage an unidentified eastern team to play a twelve-game schedule versus Vancouver or he would organise a Seattle lacrosse team to play in an 'international league' involving Vancouver and Montréal. Whether the failure of this international league bankrolled by Con Jones later lent weight to his Pacific Coast Lacrosse Association venture the following year involving Vancouver and Victoria (of which Billy Fitzgerald was a member), is unknown.

In April 1921 there were serious discussions between the Vancouver Terminals and the Montréal Shamrocks regarding a Minto Cup challenge in Vancouver. A three-game total-goals series was proposed by cup trustee Charlie Welsh to be played the following month – however the series then soon fell victim to a contract dispute within the Terminals organisation between the players and management, as well as uncertainty who exactly now held the Minto Cup due to the apparent split breaking out within the club into two factions.

May 1921 saw the formation of a second professional club in Vancouver – the Vancouver Lacrosse Club, fronted by Con Jones – after a large majority of the players with the Vancouver Terminals then bolted to sign with Jones due to money issues. After the New Westminster Salmonbellies declared their refusal to play Jones's new team and stated they would only compete against the Terminals for the Minto Cup, Jones responded by forming a Victoria club and starting up a second, professional league for his team to play in.

This new league was called the Pacific Coast Lacrosse Association (different from the amateur PCALA in existence at the same time) and consisted of the new Vancouver Lacrosse Club and Victoria Capitals. With two professional leagues in operation simultaneously, as many as 16 players were recruited from Ontario – the majority signing with the Vancouver Terminals in the BCLA as replacements for those players lost to the Vancouver Lacrosse Club team in the PCLA. Victoria Capitals also benefited from the influx of Easterners to buttress their roster. Amongst all this roster movement, only New Westminster seemed unaffected. However, soon after the PCLA played its first game, it was obvious to all that Victoria was seriously outclassed and talks began to merge into a three-team league with two Vancouver clubs and the Salmonbellies. No merger agreement was able to be worked out – and after five games into the season, the PCLA disbanded on June 13, 1921. Four days later, the Vancouver Lacrosse Club applied to join the BCLA but their request was denied. As the rest of the BCLA season played out, some Vancouver players in the PCLA eventually made their way back to their original BCLA club from which they had departed.

Richmond Farmers entered a club in the PCALA as well as maintaining their VALA team. This season also saw an amusing intermediate game where the scorekeeper lost count during the Squamish Indians' burying rout of the Musqueam Indians.

While the 1921 season saw the appearance of two pro leagues, the following season would see the operation of two top-flight senior leagues when the Vancouver Lacrosse Club and the Victoria Capitals formed a league under the BCALA umbrella. Over in the PCALA, the Salmonbellies and the Vancouver Elks were the two teams battling it out for honours. The BCALA and PCALA champions met at the end of the season in a three-game, total goals series to determine who would take home the Mann and Kilmarnock Cups. In a bizarre twist, after Vancouver (who were at the time very brief holders of the Mann Cup) were up 7-6 in goals after two games, they then defaulted their third game after a brawl broke out and the team refused to return to the field. The score was 1-1, so New Westminster lined up and they then went through the formal motions of scoring two unopposed goals into the empty net to take the series and the silverware back by 9 goals to 8.

The five-team British Columbia Coast Lacrosse Association replaced the PCALA and BCALA senior leagues in 1923. New Westminster Salmonbellies, Vancouver Native Sons of Canada and the North Shore Squamish Indians played in the Mainland Division while the Victoria Capitals and Nanaimo Hornets made up the Vancouver Island Division. That same season saw the Mann Cup turned over to the jurisdiction of the BCCLA. Under the auspices of the British Columbia Amateur Athletic Union, the British Columbia Amateur Lacrosse Association formed on June 30, 1923. Nanaimo became a mid-season fatality when the club withdrew after two games on July 20, 1923.

The professional league also became a fatality in September 1923 with two games remaining to be played. Like many previous seasons lost during mid-season, it was due to a grievance over scheduling.

1924 witnessed the end of an era when professional lacrosse in British Columbia died an inglorious death on June 3, 1924 after Con Jones, who had returned to finance and operate the Vancouver Terminals, suddenly withdrew his financial backing from his club – ostensibly due to poor health. When no one else could be found to step up to the plate and bankroll the Terminals, the season disbanded and professional lacrosse died an unnoticed death when it failed to rise from the ashes the following year... unlike it had done every time before when a season was lost due to a suspended campaign.

While the professional game went extinct, the senior players continued on in the four-team BCCALA, with the Victoria Garrison team replacing the Capitals and the Indians renaming their club the North Shore Athletics. In the Vancouver Amateur Lacrosse Association, the senior league abandoned its schedule after just two games and merged with the New Westminster Intermediate League.

Senior 'A' lacrosse was reduced to a pair of clubs in 1925 as the Salmonbellies and Vancouver Indians made up the two-team BCCLA senior league. Vancouver Native Sons and some remnants of the previous season's intermediate league made up the Senior 'B' league. In four short years, lacrosse fans had seen the sport transform from professionalism and competing, rival leagues to dwindle down to just a handful of teams.

Consolidation was the byword in 1926, as the British Columbia Coast Lacrosse Association disbanded when its members merged with the British Columbia Amateur Lacrosse Association on May 12, 1926 to become the sole umbrella organisation for province. The Mann Cup was turned over to the control of the Canadian Amateur Lacrosse Association the same season, the result of this being the abandonment of the challenge format in favour of the now-familiar East-West battle. The high point of this season was the success of a team from up-coast mill town of Ocean Falls. The club, conveniently made up of many former Salmonbellies from the previous season who had gone to work in the mill, defeated the senior league champion Richmond Farmers 9-7 over two games to take the provincial honours. The Ocean Falls Amateur Athletic Association club then went to Winnipeg for the Western Canada final, losing by just one goal in the two-game, total goals series.

The New Westminster Salmonbellies regained their form in 1927, taking the league championship over competition from the Vancouver Province Bluebirds and the Richmond Farmers before defeating the Weston Westmen of Toronto in 2 games and retaking the Mann Cup.

The first competitive women's lacrosse game played in the Lower Mainland occurred on May 24, 1927, resulting in a 3-3 tie between the Vancouver Ladies and Richmond Milkmaids.

In 1928, the New Westminster Salmonbellies went to Los Angeles to represent Canada at the Olympics (lacrosse was only a demonstration sport). Consequently, there was no top-level senior play on the mainland coast in British Columbia, although there was a failed attempt made by Richmond and Vancouver to form the Maple Leaf Lacrosse Club to compete against the New Westminster Salmonbellies for the provincial championship.

Senior league play returned in 1929, and for the next three seasons until the abandonment of field lacrosse, competition for the Kilmarnock Cup was held between the New Westminster Salmonbellies and various Vancouver team that came and went. New Westminster and the Vancouver Waterfront Workers began competition for the provincial championship until the Waterfront Workers defaulted their final game on August 3, 1929, threw in the towel, and withdrew from competition. The following season it was the Vancouver Lacrosse Club who provided the opposition for the Salmonbellies and in 1931 New Westminster faced a Vancouver club sponsored by Home Oil.

1932–1967...BIRTH OF THE INDOOR BOX GAME

On Wednesday, May 4, 1932, the new-fangled indoor version of the game called box lacrosse (or 'boxla' for short) was adopted by the British Columbia Amateur Lacrosse Association – replacing the outdoor field game as the primary form of the sport in British Columbia. A three-team senior box league was organised under the BCALA umbrella consisting of the New Westminster Salmonbellies, Vancouver Athletic Club, and the Squamish Indians of North Vancouver. The first league game was played on Dominion Day of that year between the Salmonbellies and Indians. Ironically enough, the game was later protested and removed from the standings – so the first box game played in the city actually did not count!

The following season saw New Westminster Salmonbellies as the sole team carried over in the BCALA senior league as the Squamish Indians withdrew a couple of weeks before the season and Vancouver Athletic Club became the Vancouver Abbotsford Hotel club. Entering the league was a new club based out of New Westminster, called the Adanacs. Consisting initially of the local players cut from the heavily Eastern-loaded Salmonbellies roster, the heated seeds of bitter rivalry between the two Royal City clubs were thus sowed. Over in Vancouver, two teams sponsored by local hoteliers now represented that city: the Vancouver Abbotsford Hotel and Vancouver St. Helen's Hotel which was made up of Richmond players. The Abbotsford Hotel entry only lasted for one season.

The Inter-City Lacrosse League was formed the following season in 1934 as the result of complaints by the senior amateur teams about BCALA favouritism towards the junior level of the game. Replacing the departed Abbotsford Hotel team that season were the Vancouver Province Bluebirds.

Three teams applied to join the league in 1935 – the North Shore Indians, Vancouver Athletic Club, and Broadway Athletic Club – and all there were rejected during the league's annual general meeting on February 27, 1935. However, after loud threats and rumblings from Andy Paull to form a second, competing league as well as hold back Squamish players from the ICLL teams, a few weeks later on March 18 the league unanimously voted to admit the North Shore Indians as an all-native squad. The only other change in the league line-up that year saw the Vancouver St. Helen's Hotel club become the Richmond Farmers.

The provincial championship of 1935 saw the debut of competition from the senior Interior teams over the next dozen or so years, when Richmond Farmers easily held off the Trail Smoke Eaters 38-12 over two games.

The following season saw the Vancouver Province Bluebirds renamed Vancouver Home Gas to reflect their new team sponsorship.

Prior to the start of the 1937 season, a dispute arose between the Richmond Farmers, Vancouver Home Gas and the newly formed Vancouver Burrards club (known as the Burrard Olympics during its first season) over the signing of players. At one point, it looked as if the Burrard club might never play a game in the league, but three days before the season opener, a solution was found which saw the Richmond Farmers and Vancouver Home Gas teams merge into one combined squad. The Burrards were named after their founders, the Burrard Liberal Association. A year later the Richmond-Home Gas Combines would be renamed the Richmond Farmers.

During the annual meeting held on October 12, 1937, the Canadian Amateur Lacrosse Association ended its affiliation with the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada and dropped the word 'amateur' from its name. The CLA became the third sport to break with the Dominion national body, following in the footsteps of ice hockey and basketball.

The ICLL remained stable through into the Second World War, however the entrance of the Japanese Empire into the conflict accelerated wartime commitments in Vancouver and the surrounding communities and the loss of The Forum arena for sporting activities. Prior to the start of the 1942 season, the New Westminster Adanacs and North Shore Indians suspended operations. Both clubs would not return until three years later as wartime hostilities were winding down with the Allied victory.

In March 1942 there was talk of commercialising the entire league under the sponsorship banner of the North Vancouver Ship Repair Yard, with a four-team loop organised including an entry from Victoria. The plan was dismissed during the league's annual meeting, although the shipyard entered a team called the Norvans as replacement for the departed Indians. Richmond Farmers were renamed the Wallaces United for one season to reflect their new sponsorship by Burrard Drydock. The Norvans team withdrew after one season.

During the Second World War, it was not uncommon for military units to enter teams in local sports leagues. This happened in local senior hockey, and back east most of the Canadian football leagues were built from military teams. Lacrosse was no exception and the ICLL would see two military clubs join its ranks. An Army team from Vancouver joined up in 1943, and a year later the HMCS Discovery naval station located on Deadman's Island in Stanley Park entered a Navy team. While the Army team finished fourth in both of their two seasons, the Navy team did better in its lone season with a solid, second-place finish. Over on Vancouver Island, the United Services club of Victoria was defeated by New Westminster in the 1943 provincial champions but the following year saw some stiff competition from the Patricia Bay RCAF Flyers. Although bowing out to the Salmonbellies, the Airmen took the first game 23-13, lost the second match by just 2 goals, before crashing down to earth in a 23-15 New Westminster victory.

Both military teams were shelved in 1945, which saw the return to the New Westminster Adanacs and the Indians to competition. After one season played as the Indian Arrows, the club was renamed the North Shore Indians in 1946. For the remainder of the decade, the league line-up stayed stable as popularity and fan interest peaked.

1947 saw the last instance of 'outsiders' competing against the ICLL teams for the Kilmarnock Cup when the Rossland Redmen were soundly trashed courtesy of the New Westminster Adanacs by scores of 24-6 and 25-5. During the seasons which the Interior provided competition for the Kilmarnock Cup, the ICLL teams held up strong the league's honour and only once succumbed to a loss, in 1941 when Trail Golden Bears defeated Richmond Farmers in the second game of their best-of-three series. This year also saw the Intermediate level of the game become reclassified as Senior 'B' lacrosse.

The 1950s opened with the Victoria Shamrocks joining the league, the first time since the mid-1920s that Victoria had played against Mainland teams in a top-flight lacrosse league. The Vancouver Burrards went by the name Burrard Westerns this season and Richmond Farmers transferred to Kerrisdale and saw themselves dubbed the Richmond-Kerrisdale 'Arkays' by the local media although the team officially kept the Farmers name. 1950 also saw a notable rule change with the reduction from 7 runners to 6 and elimination of the so-called 'rover' position.

The following season saw more dramatic changes. Victoria gained an up-Island rival in the guise of the Nanaimo Native Sons – but over on the Mainland, consolidation was the order of the day as two merged squads replaced four teams. In Vancouver, the Vancouver Combines were formed when Richmond-Kerrisdale and the Vancouver Burrard Westerns were fused together. In New Westminster, bitter rivals Adanacs and Salmonbellies were compelled to merge into one Royal City squad. Initially called the New Westminster Commandos, the club would spend the next four seasons trying to forge an identity as the Commandos, Salmonacs and Royals before dropping their Adanac 'roots' and readopting the Salmonbellies moniker.

In 1952, the North Shore Indians renamed themselves the PNE Indians to reflect the fact that they actually played their games out of the Vancouver Forum (which is still located on the PNE grounds). As well, the Vancouver Combines were renamed the Pilseners to reflect the new brewery sponsorship of the team. The league was not at all thrilled with the prospects of having one of their clubs literally using their jerseys as advertisement space for beer (this being liquor-repressive British Columbia), so the league ordered the club to drop the Pilseners name or face suspension from the league. Vancouver Pilseners were renamed the Vancouver Lacrosse Club on May 9, 1952 – but after about a month the club and press began to revert back to using the Pilseners name.

Vancouver Island almost gained a third club in 1952 when the Senior B club representing Foul Bay, in Victoria, applied without success for an entry in the Inter-City League.

In 1955, the PNE Indians were renamed the Mount Pleasant Indians and the Nanaimo Native Sons were renamed the Timbermen. The following season saw the league shrink down to four teams when the Mount Pleasant Indians withdrew and merged with Vancouver Pilseners.

In an effort to renew interest in the game, Trail hosted the Minto Cup championship finals played between Victoria Shamrocks and Brampton Excelsiors. The Kootenay city was awarded the hosting rights by the CLA as part of its campaign to popularise lacrosse in all part of the country, in conjunction with a provincial grant awarded to the the City of Trail, believing the Minto Cup would make a good civic project to celebrate the British Columbia 1858 centennial.

1959 saw an increase in brewery sponsorship of the ICLL teams. Three of the four clubs were named after beer brands. Nanaimo Timbermen now went by the Labatts name, New Westminster became the O'Keefes, and Vancouver changed the Pilsener name in favour of the Carlings. Brewery sponsorship would remain common for lacrosse teams at all levels of the senior game throughout the 1960s, until a provincial ban on liquor and cigarette advertising in September 1971 grandfathered existing sponsored-team names and prohibited any further use of team names reflecting any new or lapsed brewery sponsorship.

Burnaby Norburns moved up from junior level to senior level in 1962, which saw the league briefly expand to five teams - but not for long. After one disastrous season, playing out of the PNE Forum and in the process getting themselves banned from BC Ferries, the Norburns withdrew from senior level play.

In 1965, the Nanaimo Labatts took a leave of absence and withdrew from the league for a year (later disbanding) due to financial problems. In their place, the expansion Coquitlam Adanacs joined the league on March 23, 1965 as a replacement to maintain the ICLL at four teams. The following season, the New Westminster O'Keefes returned to their former name of glory as the Salmonbellies.

1967 – 2001

Spurred on by major league baseball's entrance into the Los Angeles and San Francisco markets in 1958, professional sports of all kinds saw an incredible explosion of growth over the next decade and a half. The major pro leagues ceased to be centred on the eastern seaboard and instead became truly continental in scope. Besides baseball's methodical expansion and consolidation, American football and basketball saw the rise of rival competition (AFL and ABA), the NHL doubled in size and soccer attempted to build and secure a foothold on the North American continent with the formation of the NASL in 1967. Within Canada, the two separate football leagues in the east and west amalgamated to establish the CFL in 1958.

And, lost amongst this wild frenzy of growth and change, was the National Lacrosse Association – lacrosse's entry into the major pro sports scene in 1968.

The league originally organised itself in the East with teams located in Toronto, Montréal, Detroit and Peterborough, but soon turned its attention towards that great lacrosse hotbed called British Columbia. For the senior amateur Inter-City Lacrosse League and its four teams, it became a serious case of join-or-die. The local league faced the strong possibility of the NLA invading its territory and setting up rival teams, which would have resulted in a battle for fans and players that the ICLL probably would lose. Seeing no other way out, the four ICLL teams instead joined up with the NLA lock-stock-and barrel and became the Western Division for the new league.

Prior to the formation of the nascent NLA organisation, the ICLL had earlier that winter explored expansion south to Seattle and Portland. The Rose City had drawn very well during an exhibition series played there in 1961 for the City of Roses Festival, with 21,000 fans in total showing up for the three games, while a game played in Seattle in 1967 drew 4,500. These were attendance numbers well above those seen in the Inter-City League at the time and fan potential that was difficult to ignore.

The Seattle applicants had demanded two players from every team, a request balked by the Victoria Shamrocks, who would have lost two decent players as a result due to the uniqueness of their geographical location. Therefore, after consideration, Portland was accepted into the league and the Coquitlam Adanacs were relocated stateside to Oregon. Oddly retaining the Adanac ('Canada' spelt backwards) moniker, the club was welcomed by an eager media in its new location which enthusiastically proclaimed in one edition of The Oregonian that the Adanacs were Portland's first major professional sports team.

It certainly did not harm the 'new' team that they had lacrosse legend Jack Bionda on their roster. Portland fans may not have necessarily known what lacrosse was all about – but they certainly knew all about Bionda, a noted Portland ice hockey legend with the minor-pro WHL Buckaroos. The ICLL commissioner Tom English admitted to the press that Jack Bionda playing for the Portland team was the deciding factor for awarding a team to Portland.

Outside of the NLA, many of those players that remained amateurs saw themselves playing in a new replacement Inter-City League. When the WLA reverted back to 'amateur' status in 1969, the 'new' ICLL dropped down to Senior 'B' level (In 1974, the ICLL Senior 'B' league was renamed the West Coast Senior Lacrosse Association).

The formation of the NLA brought about two notable changes in game play in 1968: the introduction of the shot clock and the mandatory usage of helmets.

Unfortunately, the attempt at forming an instant major league did not result in instant major league-sized crowds, and the NLA died a quiet death after just one season. The Western Division retained its full professional status in 1969 but renamed itself the Western Lacrosse Association. After one season playing south of the border, the Adanacs returned to their familiar den in Coquitlam.

1970 saw the Western Lacrosse Association abandon professional status. The league and its teams were now able to compete again for the cherished Mann Cup, something that was out of their reach during the two years of professionalism. The same season saw the Vancouver Carlings drop the beer label and return to the tradition of their Burrards name. Senior 'C' lacrosse made its first appearance in 1970, lasting for eight seasons until its remaining pockets were absorbed into the Senior 'B' leagues heading into the 1978 season.

The Nanaimo Timbermen joined the Western Lacrosse Association as an expansion team in 1975 but after seven straight last-place finishes and never making the playoffs even once, the club was dropped after the 1981 season.

Financial difficulties and debt from travel to the Mainland almost forced the Victoria Shamrocks to fold prior to the start of the 1983 season. After the entire board of directors resigned en masse in mid-April, the club was saved by an influx of sponsorship money from Payless Gas. The Shamrocks moniker was dropped and the team name changed to 'Victoria Payless' to reflect their new sponsor saviors.

Trying to capitalize on the past glories and popularity of the junior Richmond Roadrunners, the Richmond Outlaws joined and became the WLA's fifth team in 1986.

After four seasons, poor attendance forced the Outlaws to relocate to Burnaby in January 1990 and become the Burnaby Lakers. At the same time the Lakers joined the Western Lacrosse Association, the Coquitlam Adanacs found themselves in dire straits due to debt problems and a dwindling player base, and the franchise was surrendered to league authorities in February 1990 to manage and find a new operating ownership group. Meanwhile, the the Vancouver Burrards left their long-time home at Kerrisdale Arena and moved across the city to the Argidome, located on the PNE grounds, for the 1990 season.

1994 was the next year of major change in the WLA. The North Shore Indians made the jump up from Senior 'B', expanding the league to six teams. Victoria returned to their familiar Shamrocks name after Payless Gas dropped sponsorship of the lacrosse team, while the Burrards left Vancouver after fifty-seven seasons for the growing suburb of Surrey. The Surrey Burrards would play just two seasons in North Surrey before moving further up the Fraser Valley and across the river in 1996 to their present home in Maple Ridge.

2000 saw the WLA leave its familiar confines of the Lower Mainland and Vancouver Island for the first time since the demise of the NLA when the North Shore Indians officially moved into the interior of the province. The Indians had played parts of the previous campaign in Kelowna and moved there full-time in 2000 to become the Okanagan Thunder. Kelowna would be called home for two seasons until the Thunder returned to North Vancouver in time for the start of the 2002 season.

Lacrosse fans throughout the province witnessed one of the most eventful off-seasons ever with the arrival of the Vancouver Ravens and legitimate professional lacrosse in the shape of the National Lacrosse League. In 2001-02, the team's debut season, the Ravens garnered a winning season and made it to the first round of the playoffs before being knocked out in overtime by Rochester. Their 10-6 win-loss record translated into a .625 finish, tying them with Buffalo Bandits' 1992 record for the league's second best start by an expansion team. Not all of the success was on the floor either as an average of 10,212 fans walked through the turnstiles of GM Place.

The 2002-03 season however was a rude awaking for the Vancouver Ravens. The team stumbled through a 3-6 start as serious ownership and financial troubles became public and cast some immediate uncertainty over the club's future. Attendance decreased by a fifth to an average of 8,337 compared to the 2001-02 campaign – but finishing up on a 6-1 roll certainly helped perk up hopes for the future as well as propelling Vancouver into a post-season berth. The Colorado Mammoth extinguished the sophomore season when they dispatched Vancouver 15-12 in their quarter-final playoff meeting.

After playing fifty-three seasons at Memorial Arena, the Victoria Shamrocks were compelled in 2003 to play their games in a smaller facility in nearby Esquimalt while the brand-new Bear Mountain facility was being built.

The Vancouver Ravens' third NLL campaign saw continued struggles both on and off the floor. Average attendance in 2003-04 sank to 7,124 per game as the Ravens wound up with a 5-11 record, second-worst in the league and missing the post-season.

The North Shore Thunder were on the move again as they relocated to Langley for the 2004 season – the same season the Nanaimo Timbermen failed in their initial application to join the WLA as the league's seventh team. The Hub City re-submitted their application the following year and were accepted into the league on October 7, 2004 (starting play in 2005) as the first WLA expansion club seen in a decade.

Less than one month before the start of 2004-05 NLL season, the Vancouver Ravens threw in the towel on December 17, 2004 after playing a pre-season game in Prince George. Crippling debt load, dwindling attendance, and a chain of chronically underfinanced and unstable ownership groups sounded the deathknell of pro lacrosse in Vancouver.

Despite the folding of the Ravens, the Western Lacrosse Association entered an unprecedented period of stability starting in 2005 with no team-name changes nor location movement, continuing up to the present day – a most impressive span that has played out over 17 seasons in 19 years.

The return of the professional National Lacrosse League to the Lower Mainland, however, would have to wait for a decade until the Everett-based Washington Stealth relocated to suburban Langley for the 2014 NLL season. While having excellent success on the floor while in Everett, going to the NLL championship finals twice in four seasons, the rebranded Vancouver Stealth would stumble to 4-14 and then back-to-back 5-13 finishes in their first three seasons. The club saw their home attendance inch up from an average of 3,590 in their 2014 debut to 3,758 by their third season (2016) – the considerably lower numbers reflective of playing in a much smaller facility than their Ravens forebearers.

In their fourth campaign, the Vancouver Stealth finally reached the .500 mark finishing with a 9-9 record in the 2017 season and making their first post-season appearance since their arrival in Langley. Colorado Mammoth would defeat the Stealth 13-12 in the single-game quarter-finals. Attendance however did not match the impressive improvement on the floor, dropping to an average of 3,206 per game – the lowest gate showing at the Langley Events Centre since relocation.

Whatever gains they made on the floor in 2017, disappeared the following year as the 2017-18 season saw the Stealth bottom out with a 0-4 start and end up winless at home all season, finishing last with 2 wins and 16 losses and 6 games behind the next team above them in the standings. Despite their atrocious record on the floor, attendance improved in the stands with an average of 3,507 fans per game.

After five seasons in Langley, on June 18, 2018 the National Lacrosse League approved of the sale of the Vancouver Stealth to the ownership of the NHL Vancouver Canucks. The club would be relocated downtown to the former home of the Vancouver Ravens, the now-renamed Rogers Arena. Desiring a completely clean slate, both the Stealth name and management were replaced. On September 21, 2018, the new name and uniforms for the re-branded Vancouver Warriors were announced.

On the floor, the Warriors struggled through the 2018-19 season due to the need for a long-term rebuild after years of dealing away draft picks. Their 5-13 record was the worst in the West Division and second worst in the league. However, while on the low-end by overall league standards, the 6,833 average attendance at Rogers Arena was a massive improvement from their Stealth days, with more than 3,000 per game increase compared to the crowds seen while playing in Langley. On a positive historical note, this was easily the best attendance seen in the franchise's history since its founding two decades ago in 2000 in Albany and through subsequent relocation moves to San Jose, Everett, and Langley.

The 2019-20 would mirror the same challenges on the floor as the Vancouver Warriors found themselves stuck last in the Western Division with a 4-9 record, when the National Lacrosse League suspended play on March 12, 2020 due to the COVID-19 coronavirus pandemic outbreak. A few weeks later on April 8, 2020, the National Lacrosse League cancelled remainder of the regular season. Playoffs were cancelled on June 4, 2020 when it became apparent there was no hope of restarting the season that year. Attendance at Warriors home games dropped slightly to an average of 6,769 prior to the suspension of play.

Senior A lacrosse would never get underway during the pandemic, as the Western Lacrosse Association cancelled its 2020 campaign on May 19, 2020. It would be the first time since 1928 that there was no Senior A lacrosse played at all in the province. National championships were subsequently cancelled by the Canadian Lacrosse Association – resulting in no competition for the Mann Cup and Minto Cup. The last time the Mann Cup had gone uncontested was over a hundred years ago during the First World War, while the Minto Cup had last gone unplayed during the years of the Second World War.

2021 – TO THE PRESENT

The National Lacrosse League made plans to resume play with an abbreviated Spring 2021 campaign however that too was cancelled on February 3, 2021, with new plans made the following month for a full 2021-22 season starting in December.

On March 29, 2021 the Canadian Lacrosse Association rebranded and changed its name to Lacrosse Canada.

League and championship play was put on hold for a second year on May 18, 2021 when the Western Lacrosse Association and Ontario Major Series announced the cancellation of their seasons. Lacrosse Canada announced on the same day the cancellation of the Mann Cup.

In December 2021 the National Lacrosse League resumed league play for the first time since the start of the pandemic. Initially strong out of the gate, the Vancouver Warriors found themselves playing .500 ball after 10 games. That, however, was followed up by embarking on a 1-7 losing skid in the later half of the season, which saw the team nosedive and once again occupying last place in the Western Division, finishing out of the post-season with a 6-12 record. On a positive note, attendance increased slightly by 150 per game average to 6,919. With league attendance down overall, much to do with playing in the wake of the pandemic, the Warriors found themselves finish for the first time in the upper half of league-wide attendance numbers.

May 2022 saw the resumption of play in the Western Lacrosse Association after a two-year hiatus.

During the 2022-23 season that followed in the NLL, the Vancouver Warriors saw their attendance numbers make a healthy increase of around 18% to improve to yet another franchise high of 8,165 average per game, which was good enough for fourth-overall in the league. The positive results in the stands unfortunately did not mirror the results on the floor as the team repeated a cellar finish in the West Division with a dismal 4-14 record.

MANN CUP CHALLENGES

Vancouver Athletic Club defeated Calgary Chinooks in two-game, total-goals series 17-2 (12-0, 5-2)

Vancouver Athletic Club defeated Brampton Excelsiors in two-game, total-goals series 10-7 (4-5, 6-2)

Vancouver Athletic Club defeated the Calgary Chinooks and Brampton Excelsiors in 1914 but the Mann Cup trustees disputed the status of one of the Vancouver players. Despite the views of British Columbia and National lacrosse and amateur athletic organisations that supported Vancouver's position, the Mann Cup trustees instead awarded the cup to the Calgary Chinooks on September 29, 1914. On December 7, 1914, the Canadian Amateur Lacrosse Association overruled Mann Cup trustee Joseph Lally and awarded the cup to the Vancouver Athletic Club.

At the BCLA Annual Meetings on May 8 and 15, 1919, the Minto Cup Trustees and British Columbia Lacrosse Association refused to recognise the results of the Vancouver-New Westminster 1918 series as being official. Vancouver won the Mainland Lacrosse Association series but was not awarded the Minto Cup. Vancouver claimed that they were in perfect order to organize a new league in lieu of the BCLA, which had suspended operations for the duration of World War One. New Westminster disagreed and claimed (after the fact) that their club did not actually operate in 1918.

Vancouver West Ends renamed Vancouver Towers in mid-season on July 4, 1918

The 1918 Junior Standings are based on two versions, as they appeared printed in the Vancouver Daily Province on August 2, 1918 and August 8-9, 1918. Goal totals do not add up and are off by one goal - however individual game scores are impossible to confirm due to the very poor condition and unreadable state of available microfilm. The standings do contain defaulted games by Vancouver Towers and Vancouver Adanacs occurring at the end of the season.

MANN CUP CHALLENGES

Vancouver Athletic Club defeated Calgary Chinooks in two-game, total-goals series 17-2 (12-0, 5-2)

Vancouver Athletic Club defeated Brampton Excelsiors in two-game, total-goals series 10-7 (4-5, 6-2)

Vancouver Athletic Club defeated the Calgary Chinooks and Brampton Excelsiors in 1914 but the Mann Cup trustees disputed the status of one of the Vancouver players. Despite the views of British Columbia and National lacrosse and amateur athletic organisations that supported Vancouver's position, the Mann Cup trustees instead awarded the cup to the Calgary Chinooks on September 29, 1914. On December 7, 1914, the Canadian Amateur Lacrosse Association overruled Mann Cup trustee Joseph Lally and awarded the cup to the Vancouver Athletic Club.

**NOTE: Vancouver Athletic Club defeated the Calgary Chinooks and Brampton Excelsiors in 1914 but the Mann Cup trustees disputed the status of one of the Vancouver players. Despite the views of British Columbia and National lacrosse and amateur athletic organisations that supported Vancouver's position, the Mann Cup trustees instead awarded the cup to the Calgary Chinooks on September 29, 1914. On December 7, 1914, the Canadian Amateur Lacrosse Association overruled Mann Cup trustee Joseph Lally and awarded the cup to the Vancouver Athletic Club.*

\*NOTE: There was no competition for the Mann Cup in 1916 and 1917 due to the First World War.*

* NOTE: Newspaper accounts from the early 20th Century listed Victoria as the first provincial champion in 1890 although contemporary accounts from that year indicate New Westminster as the champion.

** NOTE: Newspaper accounts from the early 20th Century listed New Westminster as the provincial champion in 1893 although contemporary accounts from that year indicate Victoria as the champion.

*** NOTE: Victoria was leading 3-2 versus New Westminster in the championship playoff game on October 21, 1894 when the game was called due to darkness. Victoria withdrew from the BCALA on November 2, 1894 in protest of referee indecision and due to New Westminster arriving at Brockton Oval an hour and a half late which resulted in the late start.
